ACCEPTOR'S LAW ASPIRATION ON PLANNING FAMILY PROGRAM
SERVICES (Study in Pekuden Village, Banyumas Regency)

ABSTRACT

This research aims to determine the acceptor's legal aspirations for family planning program services in Pekuden Village, Banyumas Regency and the influence of age, religion, and education factors on acceptor's legal aspirations in the service of family planning studies in Pekuden Village.

This research used quantitative research method with a sociological juridical approach and descriptive research specification. The location is in Pekuden Village, Banyumas Regency. Sampling through simple random sampling method. The data used include primary and secondary data obtained by questionnaire, documentary, and literature methods. Data processing by editing, coding, and tabulation.

The results showed that the level of acceptor's legal aspirations for family planning program services in Pekuden Village, Banyumas Regency is high. It is evidenced by the results of research on three indicators including the good level of acceptor's legal aspirations towards the goals of the family planning program, the high legal aspirations in implementing family planning programs efforts, and the effective legal aspirations of the forms of family planning program efforts. Age and education factors tend to have a positive influence on the level of acceptor's legal aspirations in family planning program services and religious factors apparently have less influence on the level of acceptor's legal aspirations in family planning program services in Pekuden Village, Banyumas Regency.
