B. Implication

Based on the results of data analysis, discussion and conclusions, there are several implications as follows:

1. Based on the results of the study, the village government is expected to continue to be consistent in conducting feasibility tests on beneficiary families so that the assistance programs provided can be changed for other residents in need. It is also feared that this will cause a new problem: social jealousy between people. The government needs to conduct surprise inspections to go directly to the community.

2. The Village Fund Cash Direct Assistance Program is Pro-poor, indicating that the biggest beneficiaries of this program are the poor, as it is known that the Village Fund Cash Direct Assistance program aims to improve the welfare of families affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. These results are undoubtedly good achievements and must continue to be improved. Because some groups of recipients of the Village Fund Cash Direct Assistance yet have middle-high incomes. The village government is expected to continue consistently conducting supervision to ensure the distribution of benefits from the program.

C. Research Limitations

In this study, there are still some limitations, including the following.

1. In collecting data through interviews and questionnaires, some respondents were unfamiliar with the questions asked, and some were hesitant to answer the questions because they were worried that the answers would affect their position as beneficiary families. This is addressed by slowly re-explaining, adjusting the language to be easier to understand, and developing the form of the question.
2. Limited research using Benefit Incidence Analysis and appraisal program effectiveness techniques in analyzing cash direct assistance programs. Therefore, qualitative explanations are used about the reality found during observation and interview
