ABSTRACT

This study aims to determine the level of legal awareness of the community towards the rules for restricting community activities and the influence of educational factors, work factors and motivational factors on public legal awareness of the rules for Restricting Community Activities in Duren Sawit Village, Duren Sawit District, East Jakarta. This study uses quantitative research methods with a sociological juridical approach and descriptive research specifications. This research is located in Duren Sawit Village, Duren Sawit District, East Jakarta with 50 (fifty) respondents as respondents. The research sample was taken using simple random sampling. Types of data sources include primary and secondary data obtained using the questionnaire, documentary and library methods. The collected data is processed using coding, editing, and tabulation techniques and then presented in the form of narrative text and data tables. Quantitative data analysis used simple statistical methods, while qualitative data analysis used content analysis and comparison analysis methods. The results of the study show that public legal awareness of the rules for restricting community activities in Duren Sawit Village, Duren Sawit District, East Jakarta is high, this can be measured by the following indicators: the high level of legal knowledge of the community towards the rules for restricting community activities; the high level of community legal understanding of the rules for restricting community activities; the number of people agreeing with the rules for limiting community activities; and the number of patterns of community behavior in accordance with the rules for limiting community activities. Educational factors and motivational factors tend to have a positive effect on people's legal awareness of the rules for restricting community activities, while profession factors tend to have no effect on community legal awareness of restrictions on community activities.
