INTRODUCTION

All praise and gratitude of the author prays for the presence of Allah S.W.T for all the abundance of grace and gifts in the form of uninterrupted knowledge, so that with His permission the author can finally complete this Thesis, as is a requirement to obtain a Bachelor of Laws degree in the Law Study Program, Faculty of Law, Universitas Jenderal Soedirman Purwokerto.

The author realizes that there is nothing perfect in the world, especially this work, of course, is far from perfect, improvements here and there must continue to be made to minimize all existing shortcomings and mistakes. Borrowing the proverb "there is no ivory that is not cracked", the author greatly appreciates if there is a reprimand from all parties, whether constructive or not, to be an improvement in the future.

On this occasion also, with all humility, let the author express only the highest gratitude and appreciation to all parties who have helped in the completion of this Thesis, both in the form of guidance, direction, input, suggestions, criticism, encouragement and advice that is really priceless.

Finally, despite all the shortcomings that exist, whether it is in terms of intellectuality or the form of presentation, the author still hopes that no matter how small this work can still be useful, even if it is like a speck of foam in the vast ocean of science.
