

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

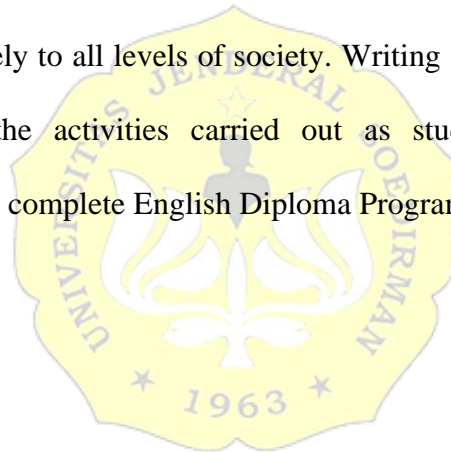

A. Conclusion

The job training has done. Even though at LPPL Radio Swara Widuri Pematang does not have English programs, both in terms of broadcasts and news, the writer was still given the opportunity to write English news which can then be uploaded on the institute's personal Instagram page.

In the implementation of the job training, the writer made observations in the field to find news material along with the staff of LPPL Radio Swara Widuri Pematang. The writer also conducted several interviews with several sources (radio staff) to find out the journalistic process took place. On the same occasion, the writer consults with the institute's publication staff regarding the news produced. From the process that was felt during one month of job training, the writer realized how different it was from the study period and when he went directly to the field. Basically, the writer always applies the knowledge gained while still doing journalism lessons in class. A lot of experience gained by the writer while doing job training at LPPL Radio Swara Widuri Pematang, such as controlling a website and doing officer administration. By practicing directly, the writer can open opportunities, developing skills in the field of journalism and English, and establish communication with various parties. With the implementation of job training, the writer can also indirectly exchange ideas, knowledges, and experiences that can assist the writer in solving the problems. The writer got positive responses from various parties within the institute with the results of work during job practices, this makes the writer always motivated to be able to work again in the near future.

Although there were some difficulties experienced by the writer during the job training process, this was not used as an obstacle to continuing to develop. The writer hopes that what was gained during a month can provide more knowledge in the world of journalism and English. Of course, with this job training, the writer hopes that the role of English will be opened widely to all levels of society. Writing a job training report is a whole about the activities carried out as students to complete the requirements to complete English Diploma Program degree.

B. Sugestion

Some suggestions that the author wants to convey in this final report for the faculty, institute, and journalism students who will carry out job trainings in the future.

1. The Faculty should be able to establish direct communication with the institutions, as the result, good relations and cooperations are established between the institute and the faculty.
2. The writer hopes institute that relate to journalism in the future will be able to hold an English program, so that the purpose of English as an international language can be achieved.
3. For the next journalism student, prepare early to carry out job training. Because there are so many points that you have to face when the job training takes place.
