

CHAPTER V CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. CONCLUSION

In translating children book “Tania and The Mystery Smoker”, It can be concluded that three stages were applied in the translation process: The first stage was the analytical stage, the analytical of children’s book. The first thing to do at this stage was reading the story. The second stage was the transfer stage, which translated story from English into Indonesian. The steps were used to translate one sentence at a time according to the story and looking for the words equivalent. The last stage was the reconstruction stage. This step was done while during the revision of the translation results, by reading the entire translations results carefully. If there was any word or sentence that was less acceptable in the target language, it needed to be improved.

Next the writer uses previous studies from Agil Suswanto's and Dinda Putri Amalia's. They were used to avoid duplicating the same translation title.

B. Suggestion

The suggestions are:

- a. It is preferable for student, the subject material for translation specialization should vary more. As well as student study material references not only from print but also to learn more from digital media because of many informative electronic journals and reading source.
- b. It is best to look for the title of the book as a final report is not hasty. Students should have planning to translate a book that is interesting.
