

CHAPTER V CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

Based on the previous chapter, it can be concluded that to produce a short movie several stages should be done, such as development, pre-production, production, post-production and distribution. However, there are differences between movie-making theory and implementation of the theory in the field. for example in the production stage, the footage taken has a lot of improvisation from the storyboard due to conditions in the field.

Voice over is one of the movie components. voice over is usually used as a narrative voice or to convey the inner thoughts of the characters. In recording voice over, several techniques are needed so that the audio results can match the scene.

A short movie has its own language according to where it is produced. In this job training, the short movie is made in English so that it can be enjoyed both domestically and abroad.

B. Suggestion

This suggestion is intended for English diploma program students who will choose job training in the movie industry, it is better to prepare a clear and logical story. Before the execution stage (shooting), provide plan A and plan B because it would help during the production stage. It would be better if the movie used vocabulary that is commonly used in a movie suitable to its genre.
