B. Recommendation

1. Business operators, both television stations and radio stations, should have a better understanding of copyright regulations and their management when using someone else's creation to be broadcasted in their programs to prevent any unlawful actions that may lead to disputes.
2. To minimize copyright infringement, it is advisable for business operators to seek permission from the creator before using their creation in their programs before broadcasting, especially if the broadcast program can be categorized as commercializing the creation.
