ABSTRACT

There are still street vendors selling in inappropriate places, so there is a need for structuring and managing street vendors. The aim of this research is to determine the level of legal awareness of street vendors (PKL) regarding the obligations and prohibitions in structuring and managing PKL and to determine the influence of motivation, discipline and income factors on PKL's legal awareness of the obligations and prohibitions in structuring and managing PKL. This research is empirical research with a quantitative empirical, juridical approach method, descriptive research specifications. The research location was Pancasila City Park, Salatiga with 28 street vendors as respondents. Research samples were taken using random sampling. Types and sources of data include primary data and secondary data obtained using questionnaire, documentary and library methods. The collected data was processed using coding, editing and tabulation methods and analyzed using frequency distribution analysis, cross table analysis, content analysis and comparative analysis. The research results show that the level of street vendors' legal awareness of the obligations and prohibitions in structuring and managing street vendors is high. This can be proven by 4 (four) indicators, namely; the high level of legal knowledge of street vendors regarding the obligations and prohibitions of street vendors; the high level of legal understanding of street vendors regarding the obligations and prohibitions of street vendors; the large number of street vendors' legal attitudes that agree with the obligations and prohibitions of street vendors; the many patterns of legal behavior of street vendors that are in accordance with the obligations and prohibitions of street vendors. Motivation and discipline factors tend to have a positive effect, a this means that the higher the level of motivation and discipline of street vendors, the higher the level of legal awareness of street vendors regarding obligations and prohibitions in structuring and managing street vendors, while income factors tend not to have a significant effect on street vendors' legal awareness of obligations and prohibitions in structuring and managing street vendors.
