ABSTRACT

ANGGA HERNANTO. This study aims to determine the prospects and constraints of the sheep business and examine efforts to develop sheep farms in the District of Cilongok. The target of the research is the breeder and sheep breeding business in Cilongok District, Banyumas Regency. The research method used was a survey method. Sampling of the area is done intentionally (purposive sampling). The number of research respondents was 56 people. The results showed that the business prospects of sheep livestock in the Cilongok region were quite good with the support of adequate Human Resources (HR), large tracts of land, abundant agricultural waste, facilities and infrastructure available. The constraints of the sheep business in the Cilongok area are sideline businesses, traditional maintenance, lack of technological understanding, marketing is still conventional, institutional farmers are less active, and extension workers rarely provide information about sheep farming. The strategies that can be carried out in the development of sheep business in the District of Cilongok are 1) conducting cultivation planning and application of forage processing technology, 2) improving the quality of human resources through training and counseling in the sheep business, 3) visiting farmers or apprenticing to sheep-producing areas, 4) breeders create groups to improve communication and cooperation.
