

CHAPTER V CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

The completion of job training at the Immigration Office Cilacap. The job training indicates that Immigration Office Cilacap requested to make an informational video in the form of frequently asked questions by foreigners. The final product was creating an informational video about deportation with English and Indonesian subtitles. Therefore, It could be reasonably deduced that informational videos can be employed as a means of acquiring pertinent information and regulations pertaining to deportation. A variety of measures have been implemented with the objective of guaranteeing that the content is readily comprehensible.

In making the video, the production of this video details a series of stages, including pre-production, production, and post-production. The pre-production stage represents the initial phase of the video production process. The pre-production stage encompasses the creation of a video script, the determination of the locations that could be utilized for the filming of the video, the identification of the individuals who would be featured in it, and the selection of the props that would be employed to facilitate the production of the informational video. The production stage represents the implementation of the plans devised during the pre-production phase. This stage encompasses the processes of video recording utilising a range of techniques, audio recording, and the provision of an explanation of the deportation regulations. The post-production stage was the final stage of the video production process. It involves editing the video, incorporating text, and combining all footage and materials.

B. Suggestion

In carrying out a job training for three months, there are several suggestions that are expected to improve the effectiveness and smoothness of the job training process, some of these suggestions include there has to be a willingness to learn new things. While working at the Cilacap Immigration Office, we are required to be able to serve applicants and assist with some work related to the study programme, such activities may include assisting in the direct provision of services to foreigners. Therefore, communication, appearance, time management and a professional attitude are very important, Confidence and learning new things that build networks or relationships.
