Suami dan orangtua masing-masing berperan dalam mendukung aktivitas domestik maupun aktivitas publik yang dilakukan informan, sehingga kedua aktivitas tersebut dapat berjalan lancar dan tidak menimbulkan gangguan yang berarti satu sama lain. Mahasiswi berstatus menikah yang menjadi informan penelitian ini mengalami sejumlah kendala dalam menjalankan peran berikut aktivitasnya dalam ranah domestik maupun aktivitas publik. Meskipun demikian, semua peran tersebut dapat berjalan dengan baik dan tidak banyak mengganggu. Hal tersebut dipengaruhi oleh dukungan dari orang-orang terdekat, yaitu suami dan orang tua, serta kondisi perkuliahan yang tinggal menyelesaikan skripsi.

Saran yang diajukan: Mahasiswa yang ingin menikah pada saat masih berkuliah perlu mengantisipasi berbagai kesulitan dan dampak negatif bisa ditimbulkan dari perkawinannya. Hal yang dapat dilakukan antara lain menikah pada semester-semester akhir agar kegiatan akademik tidak terlalu terganggu, memastikan dukungan sosial dari orang-orang terdekat, khususnya keluarga, menunda memiliki anak setidaknya sampai lulus kuliah. Semua itu dapat mereduksi potensi terjadinya kesulitan dan dampak negatif dari perkawinan pada saat masih kuliah, sekaligus memberikan iklim yang kondusif bagi kehidupan rumah tangga maupun aktivitas kuliah.

SUMMARY

This research is entitled: "Negotiation of Public and Domestic Space among Married Undergraduate Students in Purwokerto". The aim of the research is to describe how married female students negotiate between college and household duties and describe the obstacles faced by married female students in carrying out their roles as housewives and students.

This research was conducted in Purwokerto. The subjects of this research were student of the undergraduate program who were married. The research method uses qualitative methods, the sampling method uses purposive sampling, the data collection method uses in-depth interviews, observation and documentation. Data validity uses source model triangulation techniques. The data analysis technique uses interactive model analysis.

The research results showed that married female students who were research informants utilized social support from those closest to them, namely husbands and parents, in negotiating between college and household assignments. Husbands and parents each play a role in supporting the informant's domestic and public activities, so that both activities can run smoothly and do not cause significant interference with each other. The married female student who was the informant for this research experienced a number of obstacles in carrying out her role and activities in the domestic and public activities. However, all of these roles can run well and don't interfere much. This is influenced by support from the people closest to them, namely husband and parents, as well as the study conditions where all that remains is to complete the thesis.

Suggestions proposed: Students who want to get married while still studying need to anticipate various difficulties and negative impacts that could arise from their marriage. Things that can be done include getting married in the final semesters so that academic activities are not too disrupted, ensuring social support from those closest to you, especially family, delaying having children at least until you graduate from college. All of this can reduce the potential for difficulties and negative impacts of marriage while still at university, as well as provide a climate that is conducive to home life and college activities.
