A. Conclusion

Based on the results of the research and discussion, it can be concluded as follows:

1. The implementation of job training sanctions at the Qomarul Huda Islamic Boarding School Banjarnegara includes sewing, mechanical workshops, and paving block production. The coaching process is conducted in an integrated manner through collaboration between the Islamic boarding school, the Correctional Center (BAPAS), and relevant government agencies. In addition to providing conventional vocational activities, the pesantren actively seeks to modernize training methods by adjusting skill programs to current labor market developments and utilizing more systematic and practice-oriented learning approaches. Regular monthly evaluations are carried out to assess changes in children's behavior, skill acquisition, and overall personal development.
2. Factors that become obstacles in the implementation of job training sanctions at the Qomarul Huda Islamic Boarding School are child awareness factors, limited training facilities and infrastructure, lack of supervisors, and negative stigma from the community. This obstacle shows the need to improve and increase the capacity of institutions so that the implementation of criminal job training can really function as a maximum of social guidance and integration for children.

B. Recommendation

Based on the above conclusion, the author gives some suggestions as follows:

1. To the Qomarul Huda Banjarnegara Islamic Boarding School, it is hoped that it can continue to improve adequate facilities and infrastructure, adding supervisors. In addition, the Islamic boarding school also needs to increase post-training supervision/assistance so that the training process runs optimally.
2. To the Correctional Center (BAPAS), it is necessary to strengthen institutional coordination between supervisory institutions and implementing institutions, as well as to enhance supervisory functions in the implementation of job training sanctions for children, in order to achieve the objectives of rehabilitation and social reintegration optimally.
